What are Cookies?

Cookies are small pieces of text stored on your computer's hard disk when you visit a website. They allow us to distinguish you from other users of the website as each cookie is unique to your web browser, which helps us provide a better browsing experience and improve our website. They are not programs and cannot be executed as code, deliver viruses or install malware.

This site, like almost every site on the internet, uses cookies for the purpose of:

- Verifying your identity in order to ensure security
- Determining what kind of browser and settings you are using
- Allowing site owners and third parties such as advertisers to deliver user-specific content

Our Policy

GMO-Z.com Trade UK strives to protect user privacy and supply detailed guidance about how their information is being used, in order for them to make informed decisions about how to manage their cookies. We are subject to the provisions of the 2011 EU directive on e-Privacy, which stipulates that websites must:

- Tell users that cookies are there
- Explain what the cookies are doing

However, you can allow cookies from specific websites by making them "trusted websites" in your Internet browser.

Performance Cookies

These cookies monitor the way users navigate around our website, allowing us to improve our site content and provide you with a better user experience. We can use this data to tailor the site to individual preferences and help users find the information they need more easily.

For example, we use Google Analytics, which evaluates site usage and user activities such as average pages viewed and length of stay on the site.

Marketing Cookies

We use such cookies so that third party companies may provide advertising more relevant to the user. When visiting other sites where these cookies are recognised, you should be presented with content that matches your interests.
